Broadside, 46 x 15 1/2 cm. Folded at the middle, a trifle dusty, a little frayed at outer edges. Very good. Attinelli page 43: "This sale, I am informed, 'was got up for fun alone, by myself and several friends, every lot was sold and paid for.' The bidders assumed the names of the leading numismatists of the country." Attinelli incorrectly lists the sale date as Dec. 23, and refers to the owner as "S.H. Chadbourn et al." Printed card covers, once folded. These early reminiscences give full rein to Elder's acerbic proclivities. Referring to correspondents requesting information about worthless coins he states: "Of course most of the people who will ask such information have no idea that a coin dealer's time is worth money, or that he has a right to exist as well as other people. I often think some of these characters are crying out for calling by not studying law, as lawyers are obliged to ask numerous questions." Referring to customers who do not pay for but keep coins sent on approval, Elder opines: "I am heartily in favor of giving such persons a 'trip by rail,' with a liberal portion of tar and feathers to keep them warm."
